YADKINIAN 1964

"I'll show you how it's done!"

Every morning homeroom captains tallied magazine sales of the previous night.

Linda McKnight, secretary of the Beta Club, pins Lee Zachary, a new member.

An intensive effort by faithful seniors...

...and our band even has a special room to practice in.

FOREWORD

The 1964 YADKINIAN is for you who love Yadkinville High School and cherish fond memories of days spent in her halls.

Pages are so limiting and school life so limitless that one finds it impossible to portray a complete picture of what has happened in and around Y. H. S. this year. An effort has been made, however, to include some of the most important aspects of school life plus the everyday routine which is often forgotten.

The yearbook staff presents...

A MOSAIC.

For her loyalty, honesty, zeal, sincerity, complete command of any classroom situation, and for many reasons which words are powerless to express fully, the 1964 YADKINIAN is...

Dedicated to Mrs. Earl Stryker.

By fall, school

On November 22, 1963, the President of the United States, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, was assassinated. The new President, Lyndon Baines Johnson, commanded that all flags be flown at halfmast for thirty days.

"I want a train and my little sister wants a Barbie doll."

All eyes were on the representatives at College Day.

Mr. Melvin Edwards, director of the newly organized school band, gives lessons to band members each period.

"Yes, this is what I wore to the battle of Dunkirk."

Members of the cast entertained between acts.
